

Gary Ervin helped open the new facility of Northrop Grumman’s largest F-35 Australian supplier—Quickstep—in Bankstown, Australia.

(left to right) Gary Ervin, president of Northrop Grumman Aerospace Systems, Philippe Oudouard, managing director of Quickstep, and Barry O'Farrell, New South Wales Premier, display the newly signed long-term agreement between Northrop Grumman and Quickstep. The agreement will enable Quickstep to supply complex F-35 parts until 2020.

After the opening ceremony, attendees were led through a facility tour. (Left to right): Ken Crowe, vice president of NGII Australia, Barry O'Farrell, New South Wales Premier, Gary Ervin, president of Northrop Grumman Aerospace Systems, and Philippe Odouard, managing director of Quickstep.

After the opening ceremony, attendees were led through a facility tour. (Left to right): Barry O'Farrell, New South Wales Premier, Gary Ervin, president of Northrop Grumman Aerospace Systems, and Philippe Odouard, managing director of Quickstep.